Autumn House Press is pleased to announce the release of Carry You, the new short story collection by Glori Simmons, winner of the 2017 Autumn House Fiction Prize. As contest judge Amina Gautier states: “Carry You is an intense read, a linked collection of finely intertwined stories expertly dealing with the intricate nature of blame, complicity, duty, and war.” Simmons draws out the humanity of her characters, their flaws and failings, their hopes and desires, and their dreams for the future.

About the Book

“Carry You is a gorgeous, moving investigation into violence and the way that it warps us. From Iraqi to American, from soldier to museum conservator, Simmons's characters evoke the gravity of war and its inevitable breaking of the ties we hold most dear: family, friends, country—even the tie between self and basic decency. Carry You is void of sloganeering, void of easy answers, but clear-eyed in its evocation of a war in which there are no winners.

—Scott Hutchins, author of A Working Theory of Love
